The Underdogs (1994 film) The Underdogs is a 1994 action adventure and espionage film produced by Mark Canton for The CW. It was directed by Mark Achbar, and stars Tim Curry, Matthew Modine, Mercedes Ruehl, Matthew Fox, Doug Robinson, Alfred Molina, and Michael Biehn. It tells the story of Daniel Cornish, a retired CIA agent (Curry), who battles criminal organizations to fulfill his lifelong dream of going back into the field to save his family. Synopsis Daniel Cornish, a former CIA agent, is known as the D.E.O. (Destroyer of Evil Overseers) in the criminal underworld for killing the heads of a certain criminal organization known as the Triads. While making his way across Asia, he finds an adopted five-year-old girl in a Shanghai slum; his daughter, Li, was murdered by the Triads. He finds that one of the key men in the triad is John Ring, a Chinese gangster with close ties to the United States. Ring has maneuvered Li's boyfriend into becoming an informant for him, before turning the man against his girlfriend. Ring threatens to kill the woman's sisters if Li doesn't kill herself, or if Daniel doesn't give him $2 million. As the situation worsens, Daniel goes after Ring himself. It is implied that this is revenge for Daniel personally killing the leader of a rival triad family. Ring responds by recruiting Li's youngest sister, Zhao, to his cause. After the rescue, Ring's plan is to lure Daniel into a high-speed boat chase before killing him with a bomb planted in the boat. When
